

HEALTH CHECK GIGGLES ON WOMEN'S DAY

Filipino maids (from left) Petrocinia Cauilan, 41, and Agry Daraway, 25, touch silicone breast implants embedded with lumps – tell-tale signs of possible breast cancer – at a free medical check session at Mount Elizabeth Hospital yesterday.

There were a few giggles as the women passed the implants around and some practised on themselves.

More than 600 maids from the Philippines, Indonesia, Myanmar and Sri Lanka signed up for the free check-up as part of celebrations here for International Women's Day.

The programme, a first for maids here, included breast cancer prevention talks, tests to check body mass index (BMI), mammograms, skin examinations and a free lunch.
